CHRISTMAS DAY. CHRISTMAS DAY.

The blessed numiversary of the Saviour's birth was celebrated in the camps of the Army of Tennessee with unusual split and tiliarity. Foragers hal circulated for days previous throughout the country, and procured whatever was possible to add to the joyousness of the feast. Not even the humblest private's mess but rejoiced that day with some rare tibbit, some choice viand—reminder of the good, old-fasbioned Christmas time of home and peace.

lance and discipline, yet there was abund ant merry-making, within the bounds of ant merry-makine, within the bounds of reason and sobriely.

The chronicler of these little incidents of the war chanced that bright, cheery, snow-bound Christmas day to be the guest of Cobb's battery. For weeks prior he had been faring on a diet that could in nowise have been called sumptuons. It was rather the reverse—lean, mager, but ever consistent in its sparsily and sameness. A banquet was, therefore, to him an event not to be disregarded. He relished the prospect for a week, and cheerfully ate his corn-douger and midding, for he knew that something good was coming. Finally the eventful day was reached in the calendar.

A pleasant little party shar d the hospitalities of Capt. Cobb und his gallant officers. Beneath the fly of his marquee a long table was spread. In memory we have preserved the bill of fare, though we regret the bon mots, jour d'esprit and
